

Euton Daley's Unlock the Chains Collective

Privacy Notice

Unlock the Chains Collective is a performing arts organisation that combines performance poetry, theatre, dance and design to explore and highlight social struggles and injustice, especially in the African diaspora. Our work is focused on these goals.

We are conscientious in maintaining and protecting the privacy of individuals in contact with us and this privacy notice details all the ways we use personal data.

If you have any questions about this policy please email euton.daley@ntlworld.com

Mailing List

We use online provider Mailchimp to send email and newsletters. Our mailing list is uploaded and stored on the Mailchimp servers in the USA, which comply with the Privacy Shield framework and can lawfully receive EU data.

We collect the email addresses of those interested in hearing from us about our any or all of the following: performances, projects, workshops, merchandise and general news about the company.

We ask your specific permission for us to send you this information in advance. You can unsubscribe from our mailing list at any time.

As the contact details we hold for the mailing list is email only, we do not intend to carry out any profiling activity. The data is used for regular mailouts only.

There is no obligation to give your contact details directly to Unlock the Chains Collective in order to book tickets for workshops or performances. If you are purchasing merchandise from us, we will need to collect address and payment details in order to complete the transaction. These details will be held on the personal computer of Euton Daley for no longer than seven years as required by law. This computer is password protected and regularly updates protection software against malicious use by a third party.

We will update mailing permission status every two years by contacting members of our mailing list to confirm and update their contact preferences.

We do not actively or intentionally collect data from anyone under 18 years of age.

The Data Controller for Unlock the Chains Collective is Euton Daley.

Only members of our organisation and those employed by us have access to your data which we use only in the goal of promoting our activities and projects as highlighted above.

We do not share personal data with any third party unless required to do so by law.

You can request to see any data held about you by the company and we are legally obliged to send you a full and complete report showing all we have. We will endeavour to send this report as soon as possible after the request.

Website

Unlock the Chains Collective gathers and uses information about visitors to the eutondaley.com website in order to understand how visitors use the site and enable us to provide the best and most timely information.

This data is created via a cookie (a small file placed on your hard drive to store your preferences) and is confined to website usage statistics and does not identify individuals directly.

These cookies are analysed via Google Analytics to show web traffic, both new and returning visitors, and the popularity of specific pages and content.

If you have any complaints about Unlock the Chains Collective use of or security of your data, you can contact the Information Commissioners Office (ICO) by calling 0303 123 1113 or visit ico.org.uk.